

From: Gaurav Giroti <gauravgiroti37@gmail.com>

I congratulate TRAI for their verdict against Facebook's free basics and in favour of net neutrality. Coming directly to the point, a new issue has arisen with airtel and other telecom companies proposing revisions in Clause 4 (c) and it's about time that the minimum speed for broadband be revised (should be increased actually). 64 kbps is not even 2G speed, how it could be defined as speed broadband connection. Min speed should be in 1 or 2 Mbps

I wish that all internet users get at least a 144kbps speed without any plan activated by them (free of cost) and this speed should be increased to 512kbps in near future.

Thank you